Vocabulary

mystery science

Lesson: Why do birds have beaks?

beak	the part of a bird that it uses to eat experiment	a test used to discover new information about a question food	something that animals eat function	what something does model	a pretend version of something that scientists use when the real thing is too big, small, or complicated to work with mouth	the opening animals use to take in food and water needs	something an animal or plant must have in order to live shape	how something looks, such as circle, square, or triangle size	how big or small something is stomach	a part of the body where food goes after being eaten structure	the specific form and shape of something survive	to stay alive
tongue	a part of the body, inside the mouth, used for taste