Vocabulary

Lesson: Why do you find flowers and bees together?

mystery science

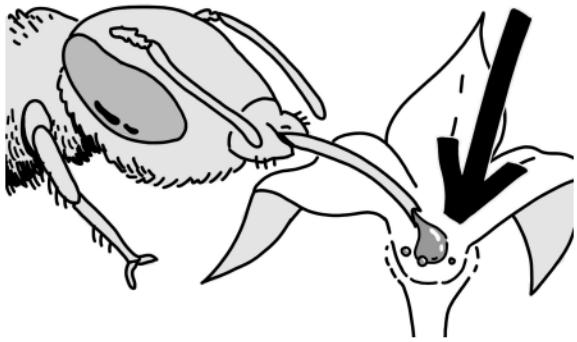

flower

a part of a plant that is usually brightly colored

mystery science

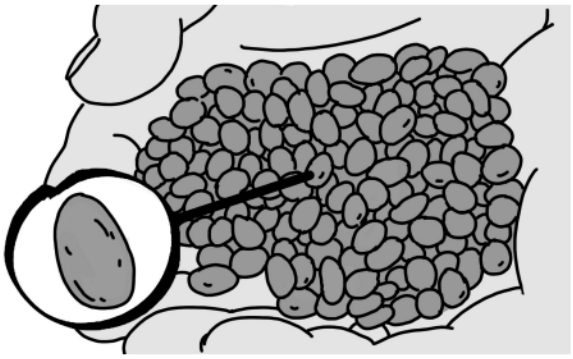

nectar

a sugary liquid that plants make

mystery science

seed

a part of a plant that can grow into a baby plant

mystery science

stigma

a part of a flower that is sticky and helps the plant make seeds

mystery science

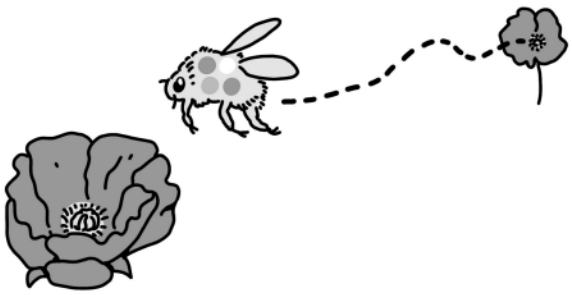

pollen

a part of a flower that is powdery and helps the plant make seeds

mystery science

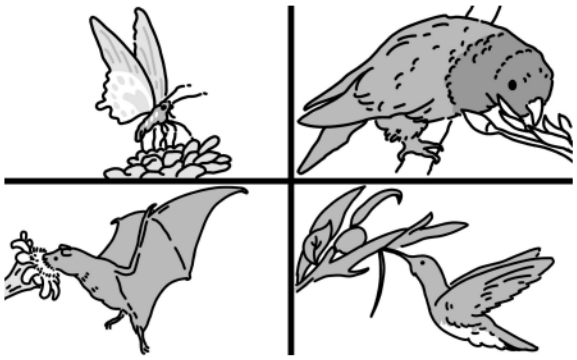

pollination

mystery science

the process of moving pollen from one flower to the stigma of another flower

pollinator

mystery science

a living thing that moves pollen from one flower to the stigma of another flower

structure

mystery science

the specific form and shape of something

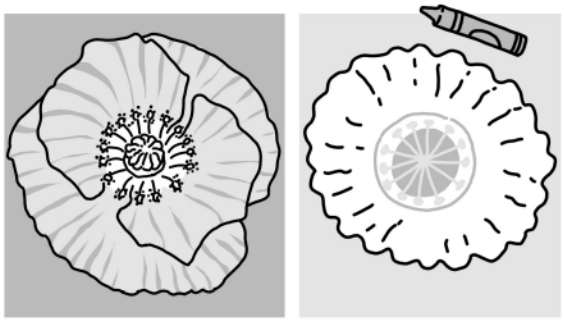

function

mystery science

what something does

model

mystery science

a pretend version of something that scientists use when the real thing is too big, small, or complicated to work with