

Lesson: Why do the stars change with the seasons?

constellation	a group of stars in the night sky that form a pattern model	a pretend version of something that scientists use when the real thing is too big, small, or complicated to work with orbit (revolve)	circling another object, like the Earth around the Sun rotate	to spin or turn around a central point, like the Earth around its axis